

SESSION IV

Reliability I

Chair: Zaher Bardai, Hughes Microelectronics

GaAs based HBT and PHEMT devices are finding ever increasing usage in high volume commercial applications. These technologies were initially developed for military applications and had mission specific reliability requirements. In this session, the authors will discuss the various factors that influence the reliability of these technologies and the techniques which have evolved to better define the various failure mechanisms.